Dear [redacted]

I am sorry to learn that your new responsibilities at [redacted] preclude a continued and enlarged participation in the Scientific Advisory Panel structure we are seeking to establish. Your contribution over the past two years as Chairman of the DCI Scientific Advisory Board has been a significant one, especially so because it took the first long step toward formalizing the linkage of CIA with the scientific and technical community.

It is my intention to extend and enlarge this linkage, and we should like to feel free to call on your consulting judgment as we move forward. I trust, therefore, that your decision to relinquish the principal responsibility for creating and guiding the panels we hope to establish will not deprive us of your counsel. I should like to ask you to remain as a consultant to me for the indefinite future and hope that your new responsibilities on the West Coast will admit this.

Please accept our sincere thanks, both as an organization and as individuals, for a difficult job well done.

With best personal regards.

Sincerely,

(signed) W. F. Raborn
